GRAND JURY'S WORK COMPLETE

Thirty-One Indictments Are Returned But no Arrests Have Been Made Yet.

PEA TRIAL SET FOR TUESDAY

Man Indicted For Grand Larceny Will Have Hearing in Circuit Court Tomorrow.

The grand jury adjourned Saturday afternoon after making its final report to Judge Sparks. It is said that the term was unusually busy, but so far there have been no arrests.

Thirty-one more indictments were returned by the grand jury. However, no arrests have been made yet. The nature of the last indictments is not known, but it is believed that some of them at least are for liquor law violations. It is said that detectives were here some time ago although no one "knows anything about it" and it is not known that they were before the grand jury to give their testimony.

The large number of indictments came as a surprise. Some time ago four indictments were returned by the grand jury, making thirty-five in all. However, there were five men charged on one of these indictments.

It is likely that the warrants will be served tomorrow and the arrests made. The trial of Chase "Monk" Pea is set for tomorrow in the circuit court. He was arrested by Sheriff King more than a week ago on an indictment returned by the grand jury, charging him with grand larceny in connection with the brass thefts. The others pleaded guilty, but Pea pleaded not guilty and will have his trial tomorrow.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DROWNING

Miss Mida Griffin and Brother Frank in Exciting Accident on Fall Creek.

BOAT GOES TO THE BOTTOM

Miss Mida Griffin and her brother, Frank, who formerly lived in this city and Miss Edith Bryant, who visited here fair week, had narrow escapes from drowning in Fall Creek, just north of Indianapolis yesterday. They with eleven other young people were in a boat which was being pulled by a steam launch. In some way the boat became overbalanced and began to sink. The passengers were panic stricken and it was only by the hardest kind of work that the accident was not fatal.

NEW TREASURER IS NOW IN CHARGE

Office Open Today and Many Visitors Leave Money and Take Away Refreshments.

CHECKING ALMOST COMPLETE

Once more the county treasurer's office is open. The work of Fred Reed, representative of the Federal Union Surety company, is almost completed. The former treasurer, George H. Caldwell, had his bond in this company, and it would not allow the new man, Alvan Moor, to take charge of the office until its auditor had gone over the books. There were many callers at the office today—some who came to leave money and others who came to get apples and cigars which Mr. Moor had for the visitors.

FIRST SERMON TO NEW CONGREGATION

The Rev. J. W. Turner is Greeted by Large Congregation at Both Services.

PEOPLE ARE WELL PLEASED

The Rev. J. W. Turner, new pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, preached his first sermon here yesterday morning. Large congregations greeted him both morning and evening and much favorable comment is heard on the new minister. Mr. Turner says he has an unusual feeling toward the church here, because he preached his first sermon in Rush county several years ago. Many members of the church here were personally acquainted with the new pastor before he came. He will not move his family here for several days yet.

TWENTY-SEVEN BAPTIZED

Revival Services at Fairview Will Continue For Few Days.

In all there have been forty-four additions. The meetings will continue a few nights longer. The Rev. Mr. Clark is conducting the services and Miss Meyers has charge of the singing.

STOCK WELL IS NOW VALUABLE

Water on Farm North of This City Contains Unusual Combination of Chemicals.

HAS CURED MANY PATIENTS

Sample Sent to Germany For Analysis and Its Real Worth is Discovered.

Just what he has found on his farm is puzzling Marion McCann. However, there is every evidence that he has found a well of very valuable water. The discovery is not new, but its real worth is just beginning to be realized. An old stock well on the farm, north of this city probably contains very valuable water.

It's this way. Several months ago Mr. McCann was doing some work on the farm and since the old stock well was nearer the place he was working than the regular well which was used for drinking purposes he drank the water which had been thought unfit to drink.

He noticed that his health began to improve and the longer he drank the water the better he felt. He concluded it was the the water which was doing it, but said little about it. He got several others to try the water and they found that it cured them. A sample of the water was sent to Germany to be analyzed and this analysis was sent to a laboratory at Cincinnati for translation. The medical authorities who examined it say it contains a very valuable combination of chemicals. However, enough of the water was not sent for a thorough analysis. Just what will be done with the well has not been fully determined.

James Whitehead is the latest patient to try the water and he says that in the six weeks he has been drinking it he has improved faster than from all the medicine he has ever taken.

WILL MAKE PLANS FOR HORSE SHOW

Committee Will Meet in Court House Tomorrow Night to Complete Arrangements.

WAS BIG SUCCESS LAST YEAR

The horse show committee will meet in the court house tomorrow night to complete arrangements for the fall horse show. They expect to set the date for the event and make all arrangements for the annual meeting which was a big success last year. There has been some hesitation on the part of the committee about the project, but they have decided to put forth every effort to make the show an even greater success than it was last year. There is no doubt about the good which the horse show will accomplish and all enthusiasts, promoters, and anyone else who is interested is invited to be in attendance tomorrow night.

PLEASED WITH THE POSEY LAND

People Believe That the Selection of This Tract Was the Best Possible.

WHAT MANUFACTURERS SAY

Like a City Where Everybody Boosts and Patronizes the Industries at Home.

The general comment as to the selection of the Posey tract for the laying out and sale of lots for the people's or factory fund addition is that no better land could have been selected for the location of factories, the proper ornamentation of the yards about the factories, convenient switching facilities and for the purposes also of first class residences.

"Better fifty years of Europe than a cycle of Cathay!" The 20th century American lives more in a week than the average man lived in a month fifty years ago. The mills and factories have produced a betterment of transportation facilities. Busy hives of industry have succeeded plodding communities in which the main element seemed dry rot. Valuable local markets have been established for farm, garden and poultry products.

One of the owners of a large factory was asked what induced them to locate their factory in a comparatively small city when large material inducements had been offered elsewhere.

He answered, "Because we observed the nerve, industry, public spirit, virility and morality of the people. The chief trait which commended itself to us was the nerve of the people. I do not use this term in its offensive sense. By it I mean the sort of intelligent, self-reliance that is bound to make an individual or town successful. The true spirit of enlightened industrialism was already pervading the place," he added. "The people all appeared to be boasters and not knockers. They did not find fault and cavil about the town, or speak disparagingly of it, its factories already located or its merchants and its stores. We found the people habitually patronized home industries, thereby encouraging their merchants toward enterprising arrangements of stores and stocks. The people did not spend their money in trade with mail order houses and in big cities. Neither did the merchants take advantage of their very commendable habit by charging more than a reasonable profit on the goods they sold."

The greatest resources of the people of any community is the resourcefulness of the people themselves. Signs of the existence of a progressive spirit are observed in the appearance and support of local newspapers, the diversification of industries and the movements, quick or slow, of the people.

Among the greatest drawbacks against civic progress are these: A population which lives largely in the past, among which society is divided into sets and castes and where competitors are too narrow and selfish to have a good word to speak of each other. Another drawback is the selfish habit of undermine buying, upon the supposition that a few cents or dollars can thereby be saved. To illustrate: A dry goods dealer desire to buy a refrigerator. He estimates that his neighbor, the hardware dealer, makes three dollars profit upon that article. He reasons that, while the article is not exactly in his line, he can buy it of the manufacturer or wholesale dealer at a price which will save him that three dollars. The hardware dealer finds that such an

VALUABLE PRIZES FOR HIGH SCORES

The Social Alleys Will Award Several Articles to Good Bowlers First of January.

WOMEN ARE NOT FORGOTTEN

The interest in the bowling game is growing as the winter months approach and the Social alleys are attracting larger crowds each week. In order to stimulate the interest in the game A. L. Stewart has offered several valuable prizes to be given away January 1, 1910. The prizes offered are: For the highest gent's score in ten pins, a four dollar hat; for second highest, a three dollar hat; ladies' high ten pins score, a five dollar umbrella, and for high back score, a three dollar hat.

The ladies were very good patrons at the alleys last winter and the valuable prize to be awarded will probably make them more interested in the sport. The race for the gent's prize will probably be an interesting one as many good bowlers participate in the game during the winter months. Scores made at the meeting of the bowling clubs will be counted on the prize.

Mrs. Jacob Hester of Sumner, about three miles south of Arlington, was kicked by a horse yesterday evening, the force of the blow knocking her to the ground and breaking her arm. Her husband, Rev. Jacob Hester, was engaged in milking a cow and Mrs. Hester was driving the horses away when one of them turned on her and kicked her. Dr. Barnum of Manilla was called and set the broken bone. Mrs. Hester was not suffering much pain today.

APPRECIATION OF LITERATURE

Mrs. May Donnan's Class Will Take up New Line of Work This Year.

FIRST MEETING OF SEASON

Instructor Gives Interesting Facts About Her Delightful Tour of Europe During Summer.

The study class conducted by Mrs. May W. Donnan of Indianapolis held its first meeting Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Thomas McWhinney. Mrs. Donnan's work here has grown in popularity each year, and this year the class is very much larger than ever before. It is greatly to the credit of Rushville women that they are showing such enthusiastic appreciation of Mrs. Donnan and her work. The study class with a professional leader is a modern and progressive method of doing literary work that busy women everywhere are adopting. No work is required of anyone. Those who have the time and inclination are given unlimited opportunity for systematic study. Others who only care to attend the meetings and listen to the lectures of the leader are instructed and uplifted.

The class this year is to study "The Appreciation of Literature," based upon Prof. George W. Woodberry's book of that name. Mrs. Donnan's plan is to discuss the chapters as given by Mr. Woodberry, using plays, poems, essays, etc., he mentions. The study is a decided change from anything the class has had before and will be interesting.

At the meeting Saturday afternoon Mrs. Donnan talked of some of the very interesting things she saw in Europe the past summer—the giving on a great scale of "The School of Scandal" in London, an eighteenth century play with all the customs and manners of the period. At another place she saw the old story of "Hero and Leander." Mrs. Donnan witnessed the Passion Play in Selzach, Switzerland. The play is given by the villagers once in four years. Some think it much better than at Oberammergau.

The class will meet Saturday afternoon, October 16, in the ladies' parlors of the Main Street Christian church.

PRESIDENT TAFT'S TOUR OF THE NATION

Thirty-five States and Territories Will Have Chance to See Him.

He Will Give the Country His Views on Many Topics of Importance.

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.

THE Taft tour will cover about 13,000 miles, or slightly less than that of President Roosevelt to the Pacific coast and longer than any other presidential jaunt in history. Starting on the president's fifty-second birthday, Sept. 15, it ends on Nov. 10, although two later side trips carry it up to Nov. 21. The tour proper covers thirty-five states and territories, and the only reason that it does not cover more is that it is not a snake and cannot make too crooked a trail. There are now scheduled seventy-five speeches in fifty-five cities, and there will be as many more rear platform talks in as many towns as railroad stops will permit and a lusty lunged populace can induce the president to make. Taft will visit the states of the insurgent Senators La Follette, Cummins, Dooliver, Nelson, Clapp, Brown, Burkett and Borah and will talk more peace than The Hague conference. Also these gentlemen should make sure that he does not steal their states away from them during the powwow. He will also visit the Rocky mountain region and the northwest, where reclamation, conservation and the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy have their lairs, and he may be expected to be the great pacifier again. He will stop off at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition and line, but congressmen are now so plentiful as to be no longer a curiosity, although it is said that lobbyists will still pay money to see them.

In New Orleans President Taft, the governors, congressmen and several hundred other citizens will gather in a deep waterways convention to consider ways and means to run ships from Lake Michigan to the gulf of Mexico. The only kind of ship that can go down there now is an airship, and it would have to fly high or it would bump into Chicago and the hills. It is proposed to enlarge the Chicago drainage canal, the Illinois river and the Mississippi until they can float big ocean freighters and passenger craft. So the president's trip is not all pleasure. It helps dig future ditches and draws water.

Winning the South.

After leaving New Orleans the president will make a general tour of the south and will incidentally eat many possum dinners. When Roosevelt went south it was the bears that were in dismay, but Taft throws a panic among the possums. No president since the war has endeavored more ardently or successfully than Mr. Taft to wipe out the last trace of sectional feeling and to erase Mason and Dixon's line from the map. He has done this by a very nice zoological discrimination. He has not only cultivated traverse the Pay Streak. He will do the cities of the coast, winding up with the paradise around Los Angeles and lingering several days in the Yosemite. He will also spend some hours amid the wonders of the Grand canyon, as earlier in his journey he had spent others as delightful about Colorado Springs and in the Royal gorge near Pueblo.

He will meet President Diaz on the boundary, and the two will be whirled back and forth into each other's republic regardless of tariffs or of speed laws. Diaz's birthday is the same as that of Taft, by the way, but he had it sooner. He is seventy-nine and has been president of Mexico most of that time—anyway a long while. He was president when Taft was a "rah-rah" boy at Yale. What the American executive lacks in years, however, he makes up in other ways. In a weighing match he would have Diaz jumping through the ceiling. The countries over which the two men preside are also slightly different.

Down the Mississippi.

One of the Texas stations at which the president's train will stop is Taft. The name is already getting into geographical fame, only in this case it is that of his brother Charley. A big ranch and a fine house there belong to Charles P., at which the president will stop for several days to rest up from his outing.

From St. Louis Mr. Taft will go to New Orleans on a Mississippi river steamboat. It was at one time reported that Mark Twain would pilot this, but Mark thought it over and concluded that a boat with the president aboard would be too heavily loaded for a man of over seventy to handle.

In the boat behind the president will come about thirty governors—all, in fact, that can be coaxed out of the brush at one time. Governors are not always easy to catch, as witness Taylor of Kentucky. Something like a hundred congressmen will also trail the procession somewhere along the possum, but by being friendly and showing that he is a jolly good fellow Taft has captured the heart of the south. He will undoubtedly extend the field of his conquest on the present trip. Incidentally he will spend a day or two at Augusta, where he played golf and escaped anxious politicians as president elect.

A Trip to the Moon.

Some ingenious and supposedly veracious figurer has made the interesting discovery that in the last ten years Taft has traveled a distance slightly greater than that to the moon—or at least he will have done so when he completes this tour. Starting when made governor general of the Philippines in 1900, he has been hitting the road at a clip running all the way from 15,000 to 50,000 miles a year and has incidentally promoted peace and matrimony on the way. This makes him not only the most traveled of the presidents, but lands him in a class by himself as a globe trotter. Back and forth to the Philippines, to Cuba, to Porto Rico, to Panama, to the Vatican and finally around the world he has gone, to say nothing of the trips he has made over his own land in outrunning Bryan for the presidency. William Jennings is something of a traveler himself, and when the two of them got on the road there were hot boxes and smoking rights of way. The country has probably never seen distance eaten up as it was in the last campaign. As for Taft, he has the peripatetic habit and may be expected to outdo Roosevelt's record as a railroad patron. It may be that before Taft is out of office the aeroplane will become the usual vehicle of travel, and if it does and if a machine can be made big enough for Taft there is no question that he will take an aerial tour. If there are any new ways of going he will be in on them, as he has tried all the ways there are in existence now—all, at least, except the submarine, and this he has probably avoided for safety. If Mr. Taft were to board a submarine the unusual weight might force the craft to the bottom and hold it there. The president will have to have his submarines and aeroplanes made to order, as he does his chairs and beds.

Even the buying of a Taft horse requires the scouring of the country in order that one may be found that will stand the strain. One of the reasons that the White House automobile is a government machine is that no mere privately owned one would be sufficient. In the matter of the present tour, however, the roads are now well ballasted and the cars are strongly built, so no fears need be entertained on that score.

Washington Toured in a Coach.

The presidential tour has been in vogue ever since the days of G. Washington, who used to go about in a coach and four, with children ahead scattering flowers and citizens on the roadside raising their cocked hats in homage. Washington's mode of travel made it impossible to cover much territory, but then there was not much territory in those days to cover. There is also a record that James Monroe made a coach tour of New England, and other parts of the country in days when there was such an era of good feeling that partisans had ceased to call each other names. I am not sure just what president was the first to make use of the railroad for touring purposes, but it was some time before the civil war. Lincoln did little traveling, leaving that to his generals, who did quite a little going, both on the advance and the retreat. Mr. Lincoln visited the front quite often, however, and rode a horse along the lines, with his tall hat far aloft and his feet and coatrails close to the ground. Andrew Johnson was a lively and violent traveler and started the term "swinging around the circle." He appealed to the country, but congress nearly got him in spite of the speed of his circle swinging. Grant traveled much and was greeted everywhere as a hero. He could not make a speech, but the country did not seem to mind. We have so many orators around loose that it matters little whether our presidents can talk or not.

There is no record of Hayes, Garfield and Arthur having done much in the touring line, but Cleveland went out upon the road and was accused of using an encyclopedia in preparing his speeches to the different towns he visited. He wanted to throw in some local color, you know, and there is nothing like an encyclopedia for that, provided, of course, that one has no up to date information. Benjamin Harrison traveled much and was widely complimented on his happy little speeches. McKinley did more touring than any other president up to his time, and Roosevelt beat McKinley.

The Roosevelt Tour de Force.

With the "rough rider" the presidential tour became more than a mere outing and gratification of the curiosity of the people. It was a means of spreading his principles. It was not only his method of finding out what the country believed, but an avenue through which to tell the country what he believed. Travel with Roosevelt was a stirring up time. If he was not stirring up the people he was stirring up the bears and wildcats. Meanwhile he was making it unpleasant for the trusts, the nature fakers and several other classes of undesirable citizens. No old time preacher went on the circuit with more of the exhorter's zeal than did Roosevelt. It was not enough to write books, magazine articles, voluminous messages, interviews and letters galore. He also went out to John Smith at Kokomo and Henry Jones at Painted Post and told them about it. Roosevelt not only believed in publicity for the trusts, but in publicity for presidents, and he got all of it there was. Whenever "T. R." hit the trail the pressmen oiled their machines and the linotype operators prepared for extra hours.

In this respect it is fairly certain that Taft will follow in the footsteps of his predecessor. His tour will be a means of telling the country what he is going to do. In his various speeches he will lay down his policies and outline the program of his administration. The vast number of addresses he will be called upon to make will give ample opportunity for this. At one point he can lay stress on one policy, and at another he can enunciate his purposes in another direction. Thus his utterances on the whole tour will be found to constitute a mosaic which, fitted together, will give his complete program. In the central west and in the home of the insurgents he may be expected to offer a defense of the Payne bill, in the northwest to outline his plans as to conservation, in the south his policy further to allay sectionalism and everywhere his plans to regulate the corporations, his ideas as to monetary reform, his proposals for additional rail-

Should the medicine fail to benefit you to your entire satisfaction we promise that it shall cost you nothing.

No other remedy can be compared with Rexall Orderlies for the easy, pleasant and successful treatment of constipation. The active medicinal ingredient of this remedy, which is odorless, tasteless and colorless, is an entirely new discovery. Combined with other valuable ingredients, it forms a preparation which is incomparable as a perfect bowel regulator, intestinal invigorator and strengthener. Rexall Orderlies are eaten like candy, and are notable for their gentle and agreeable action. They do not cause griping or any disagreeable effect or inconvenience, and may be taken at any time, day or night.

We particularly recommend Rexall Orderlies for children and for delicate or aged persons, because they do not contain anything injurious. road legislation and his opinions on other questions agitating the particular section in which he is speaking or the country at large. These speeches the newspapers will carry to the ends of the nation. Here is far and away the most important feature of the Taft tour. It infinitely transcends the number of miles he will cover, the particular cities he will visit or the brand of entertainment he will receive. The tour is the president's method of taking Uncle Sam into his confidence. From this aspect it is an appropriate and characteristically democratic event.

It is estimated that despite the length of this tour it will give only one person in eight an opportunity to see the president. Truly it is an immense country—how immense nobody realizes better than the president himself. To visit it all he would have to duplicate his journeys for the past ten years and again cover a distance greater than that to the moon.

An Old-Time Prescription

in a modern product. From time immemorial sage and sulphur have been used for the hair and scalp. Almost every one knows of the value of such a combination for darkening the hair and making it grow. In olden times the only way to get a hair tonic of this sort was to brew it in the home fireplace, a method which was troublesome and not always satisfactory. Nowadays almost every up-to-date druggist can supply his patrons with a ready to use product, skillfully compounded in perfectly equipped laboratories. Such a preparation is Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, which is sold by all leading druggists for 50c. and $1.00 a bottle, or which is sent directly by the Wyeth Chemical Company, 74 Courtlandt St., New York City, upon receipt of price.

HUDSON RIVER TOWNS PROFIT

Historic Pageant Moving Up River By Stages.

A WEEK'S ROUND OF PLEASURE

Proceeding Up the River by Easy Stages, the Replicas of the Famous Vessels, the Clermont and the Hudson, Will Be Welcomed With Great Demonstrations at Every Stop, Winding Up the Week at Troy—Special Features Marking Second Week of Great Carnival.

New York, Oct. 4.—After a week of pomp and pageantry in New York, the Hudson-Fulton celebration has moved up the Hudson and for another week the cities lying to the north will vie with each other in doing honor to the memory of Hudson and Fulton. The Half Moon and the Clermont, with their naval escort, now at anchor at Poughkeepsie, will continue their voyage northward, stopping at Kingston, Catskill, Hudson, Albany and Troy, where elaborate local celebrations have been planned. During the week a military tournament by United States troops will be held at Camp Oliver on Island park, near Albany. The troops will take part in Albany's parade on Friday.

Governor Hughes began his up-state trip today. During the forenoon he reviewed a parade at Yonkers, going on to Poughkeepsie in the afternoon, where a banquet and reception will be given in this honor this evening.

On Tuesday the naval squadron, with the Half Moon and Clermont, will move on to Kingston. A feature of the day there will be the unveiling of a monument to Sir Thomas Chambers, lord of the manor of Foxhall, and one of the founders of Kingston.

Catskill will be the scene of Wednesday's celebration. A special trip to the haunts of Rip Van Winkle in the Catskill mountains under the auspices of the Holland Society has been arranged for the officers and men of the Half Moon.

Hudson will receive the flotilla on Thursday. The capital of the state will be reached on Friday, when the Half Moon and Clermont and their escort will be met down the river by a number of Albany boats and piloted to the city, where they will be saluted by the firing of 100 guns and the ringing of church and fire bells, the blowing of whistles and the blare of bands.

As the naval parade passes up the river on the following day on the way to Troy it will be saluted by the Watervliet arsenal and will be met further along by a flotilla from the city of Troy.

At night a chain of signal fires on mountain tops and other eligible points from Staten Island to the head of navigation will mark the close of the second week's celebration, and there will be displays of fireworks and brilliant electrical illumination all along the river. This concludes the celebration as originally planned, but it will extend over to the following Monday, when the fleet will proceed to Cohoes. Then the Hudson-Fulton celebration will have passed into history. Some idea of the great crowd that his paraded the city may be gained through an announcement made by the management of the Interborough Rapid Transit company, that 13,000,000 passengers had traveled on the subway and elevated lines of Manhattan during the week. Fares for the week were more than 50 per cent greater than the average week.

BIG TIME AT ST. LOUIS

The City Is Celebrating Its Centennial Anniversary.

St. Louis, Oct. 4.—Sunday at 6:00 a. m., centennial week was inaugurated by the blowing of whistles and ringing of church bells. Services in the churches were devoted to centennial themes. Sunday afternoon 15,000 children assembled in the Coliseum and sang patriotic and religious songs.

Twenty thousand Catholic children gathered at the same time for services at the statue of St. Louis in Forest park. Bishop John J. Hennessy of Wichita, Kan., celebrated mass and Archbishop John J. Glennon made an address.

Those who did not attend the religious services flocked to the levee to inspect the torpedo boat flotilla in such numbers that the police were powerless to control the throng for a time. The aero grounds drew many thousands who viewed the airship and balloons which were made ready for today's races.

Handled Car Awkwardly.

Columbus, Ind., Oct. 4.—Alonzo Foble and Monroe Berry quarreled over a game of cards in a poolroom, when Foble drew a revolver and attempted to shoot Berry, but instead shot himself through the hand, the bullet narrowly missing Berry's head and burying itself in the wall. Foble has been arrested charged with assault and battery with intent to kill.

URGING HOLY WAR

Moorish Sultan Said to Be Raising His Fanatics.

DAVID JAYNE HILL.

Madrid, Oct. 4.—Since General Marina, commander of the Spanish forces at Melilla, opened the offensive Saturday, there is an absence of news from the front, but the recent resistance of the Moors and the Spanish losses have convinced the government that the war is not yet over, and that too much importance should not be attributed to the capture of Mt. Guruga.

Following the decision by the cabinet to send a new division to Morocco, Premier Maura has announced that he wished to end the campaign as quickly as possible and that therefore General Marina would be given all the reinforcements he needed.

The Moors are reported to be concentrated on the three mountains, Argan, Uixan and Milon, which are almost equally as dangerous of access as Mt. Guruga, and must be dislodged. There are persistent reports here that Mulai Hafid is secretly encouraging a holy war and urging the tribesmen in the vicinity of Fez to join the Rifians and expel the Christians from the country. There is no confirmation of this, but it is understood that several tribes have dispatched contingents to reinforce Harka, the Rifian leader.

OFFICERS WERE LYING IN WAIT

Illinois Postoffice Robbers Taken By Surprise.

CAUGHT RIGHT IN THE ACT

Yeggmen Were Trained to Braidwood by Inspectors Who Were on Hand

When the Burglars Began Operations on the Safe—One, Thought to Be the Leader, Was Arrested, While Two Others Made a Good Get-Away After a Brisk Revolver Battle—Many Postoffices Have Been Robbed.

Joliet, Ill., Oct. 4.—During an attempt to rob the Braidwood postoffice, two burglars were foiled by secret service men in a spectacular manner. One was captured and the other escaped.

The detectives have been following the gang for three years, but in spite of their efforts the thieves have raided postoffices at Braceville, Gardner, Mazon, Minooka and other towns, their booty amounting to thousands of dollars in cash and stamps. Learning of the plan to visit Braidwood, the officers lay in wait in a granary next door, and the intruders were allowed to begin drilling on a small safe. The detectives fired a shot. The burglars fled, but one ran into the officers' arms. The other crashed through a window, turned a somersault and escaped in the fog.

Acting on the instructions of General Stuart, head of the inspectors' department of the central west, the three inspectors hurried to Braidwood, arriving in that village just in time to capture one of the "yeggs" and save several hundred dollars which was locked in the safe. The man captured is Sam Heley, known as "Smooth Sam" and "Sam the Comet." He is forty-five years old and is said to have served half his life in the penitentiaries of Minnesota, New York and New Jersey. General Stuart praised his inspectors for their work and declared that in time criminals of this class would be driven out of Chicago and Illinois.

"The police do not get these men," said the general. "We watch them closely all the time. When they leave town we leave, too, and in this way we are able to frustrate them often."

"This was one of the most daring burglaries ever attempted. My men were on the ground, armed, and this man they got can be thankful that he got away alive. His quickness in dropping his gun and putting up his hands was all that saved him."

There had been two previous robberies at the Braidwood postoffice. There was a dance going on in the same block, and the inspectors hid themselves about the building in such a way that they believed they could cut off all escape. They lay in wait in a granary next door until the trio of burglars entered, and then went to the entrances.

The federal officers waited long enough to see that the men were actually at work at their thefts. When Heley, the alleged leader, began to drill a hole in the safe preparatory to blowing it open, Griggs fired a revolver shot into the air. Two of the men broke through windows at a bound and so escaped, but the other, turning and seeing that he was covered by the shotguns, threw away his revolver and held up his hands.

"What are you doing here?" demanded Inspector Llewellyn.

"What's the use of a fool question like that when you've got me with the goods on?" was the surly retort. His pockets were bulged with coin taken from the cash drawer. The inspectors caught the first train for Chicago and turned their prisoner over to the police.

Arkansas Man Who Shot Willis Faces First Degree Charge.

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 4.—The Pulaski county grand jury has returned an indictment against W. Y. Ellis, charging him with murder in the first degree for killing N. P. Willis of Indianapolis, in the circuit court room in this city several months ago. The shooting took place in the presence of United States Senator Davis, attorney for Willis, who was endeavoring to secure possession of a child from Mrs. Ellis, the former wife of Willis. Ellis was released on bond shortly after the tragedy occurred.

ESKIMO'S HORRID DEED

Unsuccessful Hunter Was Driven to Eating His Own Child.

St. Johns, N. F., Oct. 4.—Tragedy in the far north formed the burden of the news brought to port by the Hudson Bay company's steamer Adventure, which has arrived with the crew of the lost Dundee whaler Paradox and the story of an Eskimo, who, driven to cannibalism by starvation, ate his child and, shooting several neighbors who attempted summary punishment, fled into the trackless wilderness of ice.

The Paradox, one of the fleet of whalers, met the fate of her companion ship, Snowdrop, when she was crunched in the ice floes off Baffin Land, early in August, a year ago. The crew, with scanty provisions, made their way over the broken ice toward the mainland and were picked up by the steamer this fall.

The Hudson Bay mounted police report, through dispatches brought by the Adventure, the cannibalism of the starving Eskimo. The man's fishing and hunting expedition had been a failure and, driven mad by hunger, he cut the throat of one of his children and then ate the little victim.

When the man's neighbors learned of the horrible crime they attacked him according to the primitive law of their race. The outcast beat off all assaults, shot down several of the attacking party and escaped into the wilderness. His fate is unknown.

The prisoners who escaped are all negroes and include a forger, a burglar and six others convicted or awaiting trial for various forms of assault with weapons.

JEALOUS MAN'S DEED

Albert Carnahan Kills Wife and Another Woman and Himself.

Indianapolis, Oct. 4.—One woman was killed instantly, another was shot and died two hours afterward, and Albert A. Carnahan made himself doubly a murderer and a suicide in ten minutes' time last night in the front room of the boarding house of Mrs. Frances Carnahan, 428 North Illinois street.

Crazed with drink and armed with two revolvers, Carnahan entered the sleeping room of his wife, from whom he has been separated for about five weeks, and shot her down in cold blood. Then turning to where he heard the voices of Miss Ida Galvin, a roomer, and Miss Laura Young, a cook, he avowed his intention of killing them both. He shot and the bullet found a mark in Miss Galvin. Carnahan then ran back and, standing over the body of his wife, he raised one of the revolvers and sent a bullet into his right temple. Physicians say Carnahan's death was instantaneous. Mrs. Carnahan also died at once. The death of Miss Galvin occurred a couple of hours later.

BIG LAND CONGRESS.

Chicago Convention to Settle Many Vital Questions.

BOON TO THE HOME SEEKERS

Conference to Discuss All Kinds of Farming and How to Secure Lands and Profits—How Interest in the Movement Has Spread.

It is the sentiment of the advisory committee having charge of the arrangements for the national farm land congress to be held in Chicago on Nov. 16 that the matters of greatest importance and to which most emphasis should be given in the program of discussion are those of direct interest to the home seeker—those things which directly and pertinently answer the questions naturally in his mind when contemplating migration to any particular section or choosing a locality to which to remove in order to better his condition.

First.—He will want to know what are his chances for the creation of a profitable business in any line of agriculture.

Second.—The conditions under which he will live while building his fortune or competency. All information bearing on these two points is of first importance.

The kinds of farming most profitably done in any locality, whether grain raising, fruit orchards, cattle raising, truck gardening, etc.

How and from whom shall he secure his land, its cost and terms of payment?

What public lands, if any, are to be had and how got?

Character of soil and climate and conditions as to rainfall.

Labor conditions and transportation facilities.

Average profits based on actual experience and the degree of certainty with which the settler may expect those profits year after year.

What social environment and advantages will surround himself and family and with what kind of people will they come in contact?

What school facilities will be afforded to his children? What church affiliations are available?

In short, what are the problems he must work out in any given locality? Under what conditions and with what assurance of success?

No congress can be of practical value and benefit that does not gather and disseminate this information, but when this is thoroughly and honestly done no greater work of benefit to the country can be performed.

Heartily Favor Movement.

Congressman J. Harry Covington of Easton, Md., is in entire sympathy with the movement and believes that the development of the resources for agricultural home building in America is one of the greatest problems that make for the future betterment of our people. The successful working out of any such plan will greatly relieve the undoubtedly bad urban conditions, in his opinion.

Senator Samuel H. Piles will lend his aid by selecting a strong delegation to attend the congress from the state of Washington.

Governor Claude A. Swanson of Virginia writes, "The matter which is engaging the attention of the national farm land congress is of the utmost importance and worthy of support from all sources."

From a Traffic Manager.

From the traffic manager of the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake railroad, Frederick A. Wann, the secretary of the executive committee is in receipt of the following interesting letter:

"I note with a great deal of pleasure the organization of the national farm land congress movement, and I feel certain that a meeting of this description will bring about an interchange of ideas between those interested in the development of our country which will be of great benefit to every farming section in the United States. In addition, such a meeting is bound to bring about ideas and suggestions which, when given the proper amount of publicity, will attract the attention of thousands of people who are at the present time in a great measure ignorant of the possibilities for health, wealth and happiness in the development of the soil.

"I also note the extremely strong personnel of the advisory committee which has been selected, and with the co-operation of such men the movement is bound to take on features which will bring about ultimate success."

Fall Time in the Country.

Fall time in the country. Ain't it out o' sight? Happy days in frosty ways, And fiddles goin' right! Joy is at the gate there, Come to make a call. Take your places, fellers, And swing your sweethearts all!

Fall time in the country. Sunshine in your soul. Great old world to live in, So let the music roll! Jest the finest country A feller ever knew, And heaven itself seems smilin' Like your sweetheart smiles on you!

Forgot the toil of summer. The fruits of it we reap. Happiness is with us. Every rosy pledge to keep. Ain't you glad you're livin'? Whistle on the way. The world is makin' merry, And it's hats off and hooray! Frank L. Stanton in Atlanta Constitution.

TRAGIC STORY OF OLD FEUDIST'S END

Postoffice Reveals Secret of Hatfield's Career.

Washington, Oct. 4.—Tragic in its intensity and romantic in its sentiment is a story just disclosed by post-office inspectors regarding Harrison Hatfield, of the family of feudists of that name, who died recently in the penitentiary at Moundsville, W. Va.

The narrative is of the loss by Hatfield of $2,854; of the recovery of a part of the amount; of the murder of Mrs. Hatfield by her husband in a fit of insanity caused by the loss of his money, and of the circumstances which finally brought to an end the career of one of the most remarkable feudists in the history of the country.

Harrison Hatfield lived near Horsepen in the mountains of West Virginia. He was widely known as "Old Hatcher," and was a leader of the Hatfields in the McCoy-Hatfield feud, which amounted almost to civil war and disrupted several counties on the borders of West Virginia and Kentucky. One of his eyes was shot out during a raid which the Hatfields made into Kentucky several years ago. The Hatfields owned large areas of land in West Virginia, from which they realized considerable money.

"Old Hatcher" deposited $2,854 in the Guyan Valley bank at Logan, W. Va. Subsequently, having need of the money, he authorized Alexander H. Trent, postmaster at Horsepen, to direct the bank to forward to him the money by registered mail. Hatfield called at the postoffice repeatedly for the registered letter, but when it arrived, on April 24, 1907, he had left the office only a short time before to assist an intoxicated friend who could not sit astride his mule alone. Hatfield directed Postmaster Trent to take special care of the letter, lest it be destroyed by fire in the postoffice.

Early on the following morning the postoffice was destroyed by fire, the contents of the safe alone being saved. Hatfield's letter was not in the safe. Postmaster Trent declared he had placed the letter with the ordinary mail, all of which was burned.

An investigation of the fire and of the disappearance of the letter was made by postoffice inspectors. It was discovered that Postmaster Trent had obtained a typewriter from a Chicago concern by fraudulent representations, to which he confessed. Later Postmaster Trent and his father were indicted for having stolen the registered letter. Postmaster Trent finally confessed to the theft and made propositions looking to the refunding of the money. He produced a jar hidden under his barn, in which was the sum of $1,280, which, with $500 obtained from his bondsmen, was eventually turned over to Hatfield. Trent was convicted of the crime, but escaped from jail and now is a fugitive from justice.

Becoming insane from worry over the loss of his money and the sudden elation at the recovery of a considerable part of it, Harrison Hatfield poisoned his wife, who was an Indian woman. He was sentenced to the penitentiary for life, and there he died only a few days ago. It was not until his death that the postoffice inspectors felt justified in revealing all the facts respecting the case.

Sounds Good Anyway

"One who was there and works on the job" contributes the following concerning a party at the camp near the new school building in Center township:

The big doings at Center school building last Wednesday night was a pleasant one. There was a crowd of about fifty guests of the county came by surprise to our camp. We had a big fire in front of our tents and placed boards on trussels around the fire for seats. We took the stable door for a platform and then we began to have our fun. We had some fine music by a colored orchestra, consisting of guitars and mandolins.

The new building will be one of the best in the State for a country school house. Mr. Winship is known for his good workmanship in school houses, and Center township will be proud of the new building.

Things About People

WHILE COMING TO.

As usual there have been several things not on the program at the local millinery stores during the openings. Two strangers walked in to one Saturday and a clerk walked up to them:

"May I show you some of the hats?" she asked.

"No, we're just looking around."

"Well, I would be very glad to help you try some of them on whether you buy or not," replied the clerk.

"No, I guess not, we're just looking around," was the second reply of the strangers.

"But I will be very glad to help you look around," and the clerk started to show them some hats.

"No, no. Never mind, we are just in here killing some time. Our sister is at the hospital and we are waiting for her to come to."

Clore was rushing frantically from one house to the other in search of her little two-year-old Mary Frances. She had disappeared suddenly as if the earth had opened and swallowed her. The anxious friends were becoming more anxious and the suppressed fear could be seen on all their faces as they searched the nearby streets for the lost babe.

Little Lillia Priest, whose parents live near the Clore home was on her veranda and walked over to the window of the double house in which they live. Miss Bertha Eubank lives in it with her uncle, Theodore Osborne. When Miss Lillia looked through the window who should come up on the other side of the window but the lost child, and she was locked in the house, too. The alarm was soon sounded that she had been found and plans were made to get her out of the house. It is supposed that she had slipped into the Eubank home and they had left locking the house and not knowing that she was there.

article has been consigned to the dry goods merchant for his own personal use. He feels this is an unwarranted act of selfishness and is prompted thereafter to "knock" against the business of the dry goods man or to follow the example in other lines. If he does the latter, both have afforded examples in the community which encourage the foolish and harmful mail order habit.

Again, when a merchant takes his family to a large city to buy goods in other lines which he could have gotten at home, he is casting a reflection upon the business of his fellow merchants, and he should not complain if his example is followed by farmers and professional people.

It is an evidence of the growing better spirit of the times that the motto "Live and Let Live," is being practiced more generally. There is not the "mud slinging" among competitors which formerly existed. This improved spirit is apparent in the editorial columns and in the "ads" of the newspapers. Merchants are keeping pace with the editors in this avoidance of misrepresentation, and repulsion to taking mean advantage.

The principle of Christian brotherhood is taking a firmer hold upon the minds of men in all walks of life. The true method of selling goods is to "boost" your own in all honorable ways—not to "knock" the other fellows.

The policy to be pursued is to be a friend to your own town and to the people who support you.

What Our Neighbors Are Talking About

NEW CASTLE MAN THIEF?

(New Castle Times.)

Due to the fact that he left behind a quantity of dental gold which was wrapped up in a piece of the Daily Times, a thief who operated extensively at Greensburg, is believed to be a New Castle man, and the authorities of that city communicated with the sheriff's office, giving description of the man suspected and asking that a search be conducted for him.

The thief went to several dental parlors in Greensburg and was not particular about how much or what he took. Despite the fact that the thief carried away teeth for the gold that was in them, the victimized dentists of Greensburg are "chewing the rag" and seeking to punish the man who caused them to be losers.

In all, between $80 and $100 in gold was secured by the thief at several dental parlors, according to the information conveyed to the sheriff's office by telephone. The stolen property included a gold bridge plate, partly made, valued at $40, a 22-karat gold bridging, worth between $40 and $50, and dental gold from one place, which has an estimated value of $20.

GETS AUTO FACTORY.

(Connersville News.)

Yes, once and for all, the Lexington Automobile factory is coming to Connersville. A whole lot has been said about this before and a whole lot had to be done, but it is done or so nearly done that the "hold-up" men have retired from the field and it is now up to everybody in the city to lift up his voice in rejoicing. The work necessary in getting an outside factory for Connersville has just been achieved. All true friends of the city, all who are interested in seeing it expand, all who want to see ample work for willing hands to do at good pay all who want to see the trade of local merchants increased, can rejoice. And to help them blend their voices together in one common acclaim, there will be a big mass meeting tonight at the Commercial club rooms.

BOYS WRECK TRAIN.

(Richmond Item.)

That the court house gang of marauders used every opportunity to loot and plunder and risk life was evinced Friday morning at the police station when Walker Williams, a sixteen-year-old member of the gang, confessed to the police that he, Otto Peters, Frank Townsend, Charles Loftus and Frank Laugel had wrecked a C. C. L. freight on September 19th.

The train wrecked was the north-bound freight No. 94, due out of here about 9 o'clock a. m. The disaster was accomplished by Williams throwing a switch near Newman's Hill. It was the intention to send the train into a blind switch, but the wrong switch was thrown and the freight crashed into a wreck train. Engineer Hunt of Peru was slightly injured. When the gang saw that they had used the wrong switch they disappeared over an adjoining hill.

CHANCE FOR GOOD CACKLE

Debaters Will Discuss the Origin of Chickens and Eggs.

Some of the able debaters for which this city and vicinity are noted are preparing to bring forward a new question this year. The affirmative resolves that the first egg was created before the first chicken. The negative side feel that they have the light end of the work to prove their point, for they say there must have been a chicken and one that had reached maturity before an egg could be produced. With the prevailing price of both eggs and chickens the question ought to crowd debating rooms while it is being threshed out.

"Edward is a wonder," he was accustomed to say. "Never saw such a hard worker. I thought I was a hustler, but that boy will sooner or later be showing me tricks."

How little the millionaire realized the truth of what he was saying so proudly! Such energy and enthusiasm as Pinckney displayed must have brought his advancement in any business, and when his benefactor was also his chief and he lived in the house success was necessarily rapid. In three years he had worked up from a place in the draughting room to the post of manager. In each new position he made good, and Durant more than ever congratulated himself on his foresight in taking up the orphan son of his friend.

But Pinckney's love affair had not progressed so rapidly. Frances was glad of his success, but somehow she had ceased to be so interested in the man as she had been when a girl. By the time she was seventeen all the glamour had worn off. Instead of taking him in a sentimental way she had begun in her own mind to look on him as a sort of big brother. Pinckney did not know this. He felt that he was not coming ahead as fast as he had hoped, but he felt that there was time, especially as his hold on the rest of the family increased daily.

Durant himself now looked forward to the time when his daughter and the protegee whom he had come to regard as a son should decide to marry. He trusted Pinckney more than ever, and he rubbed his hands with satisfaction at the thought that some day both Frances and the Durant works would be well taken care of after he was gone.

Frances realized this and by the time she was nineteen had begun in a vague sort of way to accept the situation. Her friends teased her and then took the attachment for granted. She knew that she did not love Edward, but she did trust him, and she had met no one whom she could care for.

Edward had spoken to her mother and father, and both had agreed that whenever he chose to ask Frances he had their permission.

Then during the summer of Frances' nineteenth year her father went abroad, leaving the entire management of the big plant on Pinckney's hands. This had brought the man and the girl closer than ever together, and Pinckney was just debating how soon he should make his attempt when he received notice from the government that the Durant Steel works would have the task of casting a new cannon which a Lieutenant Sommers of the navy had invented and that Lieutenant Sommers had been detailed to stay at the steel plant until the work had been done. There was another gun, the "Rhinstrom gun," in which Pinckney had more than a casual interest, but business demanded that the government work be accepted promptly.

One week after the notice from Washington Lieutenant Sommers appeared, and then Pinckney's troubles really began.

From the moment of the first meeting Frances Durant and Lieutenant Sommers had seemed mutually drawn to each other. To each the other was an entirely new type. Frances had never met a man just like the young naval lieutenant. Up to that time her experience had been with men like Pinckney, who thought apparently only of business and getting ahead, or with young men of the opposite extreme, who went in entirely for society and dissipation of all kinds.

Sommers accordingly came as a new and very refreshing experience. He apparently had all the best qualities of the two kinds of men she had known before. He was young, good looking, brave, and that he had brains was proved by his invention of the Sommers gun, which the government had accepted provisionally and which was to be cast in the Durant steel works. Then, also, to the glamour of his uniform and his reputation the young naval officer brought the charm of a cultured man of the world. He had been everywhere and seen practically all there was for a man to see, and, unlike many men of his profession, he could talk about it, and talk well. So it was no wonder that the girl almost immediately felt herself drawn to him. They had so many interests in common. She knew machinery and knew all about the works, and he was up in that too. Then he drove, walked, played tennis, danced and golfed better than any one she knew in Pittsburgh. So it was no wonder that from the time of Sommers' arrival Pinckney found himself put aside.

For a week the manager of the steel works did not notice the fast growing friendship. He was very busy and had little time for outside interests. Then, also, he felt so confident that he did not pay as much attention to Frances and what she was doing as he might have had he imagined there was the slightest chance of serious rivalry. That idea at first did not enter his head. Compared to his own position, he considered the post of a lieutenant in the navy insignificant. It was not until a week had gone by and he discovered that Frances had been out with the officer for several hours each day that he finally awoke to the danger of the situation from his point of view. Then his first move was foolish. He asked Frances to go to the theater with him that night.

"Even you might be practically penniless if father had not started you."

"I am awfully sorry, Edward," she told him; "but, you see, Mr. Sommers and I are going tonight to that play. But I am sure he would be glad to have you come along. I'll get one of the girls, and we will make up a party."

"No, thanks," the man retorted shortly. "I don't care anything for the theater, you know. I only asked because I thought you might wish to see the play."

She smiled on him sweetly. "I know how self-sacrificing you are, Edward, about the theater; but, you see, you need not bother while Mr. Sommers is here. You have been awfully good to me about it, but now you can have a long rest, because, you see, he is devoted to it, and he says he gets ashore so seldom that he likes to go at every opportunity. Isn't that nice for you?"

HIDE DANGERS.

More Cries Than Warnings That No Rushville Citizen Can Afford to Ignore.

DANGER SIGNAL NO. 1 comes from the kidney secretions. They will warn you when the kidneys are sick. Well, kidneys secrete a clear, amber fluid. Sick kidneys send out a thin, pale and foamy, or a thick, red, ill-smelling urine, full of sediment and irregular of passage.

DANGER SIGNAL NO. 2 comes from the back. Back pains, dull and heavy, or sharp and acute, tell you of sick kidneys and warn you of the approach of dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Here's Rushville proof:

Mrs. M. T. Lewark, 1023 N. Perkins St., Rushville, Ind., says: "I felt miserable for some time and the kidney secretions caused me great annoyance by their irregularity in passage. In the morning I felt very tired and I had little strength or energy. Deciding to try Doan's Kidney Pills, I obtained a box from F. B. Johnson & Co.'s drug store. They have brought me great benefit, removing the lameness in my back and strengthening my kidneys. I think highly of this remedy."

"Of course that is all right, Frances," he agreed stiffly, "but any time you do wish to go it will be a great pleasure for me to take you. If I were you I would not go out too much with this naval whippersnapper. You know how people talk, and you don't want to get the gossips wagging their tongues about you and a penniless naval lieutenant. It's easy to start gossip in Pittsburgh, you know."

The girl's head came up sharply, and her smile was dangerously bright as she replied:

"That is awfully sweet of you, Edward, to warn me about penniless naval officers, but don't you think that a man who can invent a new gun is quite as good as a man who can merely make one? And then, Edward, dear, even you might be practically penniless if father had not started you."

And, smiling, she left him with his jaw set tight and every nerve muscle quivering with anger.

"Penniless," he muttered at last. "A man who invents guns as good as a man who merely makes them. I am a puddler or a mechanic, I suppose, in her eyes. Might be penniless but for her father. Well, we will see."

He whirled away from the house where they had been talking and hurried down to the works. Upon reaching them he immediately sent for William Marsh, the head draughtsman.

William Marsh had been with the Durant works since early manhood. His whole life was wrapped up in the place. Unceasing application had raised him to his present responsible and arduous position; but, like many another man who gives his life unreservedly to one concern, he had come to find himself in the end ill-repaid. To make matters worse his only child, a bright, promising young fellow of twenty, had died as the result of a terrible accident in the chemical room, and the father could not help believing that had Pinckney used proper discretion in selecting the boss of the work the accident might not have occurred.

All this had tended toward a breach between them, only Pinckney was one who cared little for breaches with his employees. He was born to rule and since becoming manager had ridden roughshod over all opposition. Particularly Marsh, fifty years old, spare, physically weak and essentially a dreamer, in love with his own work, was little fitted to cope with the iron-willed manager.

Pinckney was still fuming when the head draughtsman arrived.

"Marsh," he said shortly, "I have decided definitely to push the Rhinstrom gun. I believe it's a great gun and will prove very effective."

"It's all of that," returned the draughtsman shortly.

"I think so," agreed the manager, "and we must hurry the work along as fast as possible. By the way, what do you think of this new gun—the Sommers gun that this dandified naval lieutenant is here to have cast?"

Marsh did not know how eagerly the manager was listening for his reply. He paused judiciously a moment, then said hesitatingly:

"I'm sorry, Mr. Pinckney, but from what I can make out it will make a pretty good weapon. The fellow has hit on something new, and it may prove a wonder. Either very good or rotten, that is the way I size it up."

"You mean from the principle on which it is constructed it will either prove a winner or burst and kill a lot of people?" questioned the manager cautiously.

"Exactly," agreed Marsh, "and it will have to be very carefully made or it will burst for sure. We don't want that."

"Then you do not think it is as good a gun as the Rhinstrom gun?" suggested Pinckney.

A dull flush rose in Marsh's pale cheeks. His whole body quivered. It was the anger of a parent whose child had been attacked.

"There isn't any gun as good as the Rhinstrom gun," he cried hotly. "I invented it and I know, and, what's more, while we are on the subject, I want to tell you that I think you are doing me a dirty injustice. I have put the best part of my life on that gun, and you have patented it and put a Dutch name on it, and I don't get a cent or any credit."

Pinckney jumped from his chair, his own face red with anger.

"Look here, Marsh," he cried, "just a little more like that and I'll fire you out of these works! Who do you think you are? Don't you know that we have been paying you a salary for years for your time and your brains! We did not pay you for your looks. I'll put the name Rhinstrom on that gun or any name I please, and if you don't like it you can get out. There are plenty of men who would be glad to have your job."

But for once the weaker man would not be cowed.

"All right," he cried, "I'll get out! There are other places to work, and all my ideas have not gone yet. And,

"You let my boy be killed." what's more, as soon as Mr. Durant gets back from Europe I'll go to him and lay the case before him. I was a fool not to tell him my plans in the first place instead of coming to you. I ought to have known what I would get from you. You—the old man's voice broke against his will—"you let my boy be killed by your carelessness and lack of judgment in selecting men for the chemical room, and now you would rob me of all the credit and the money for my life's work. We'll see about this."

He stepped up close, savagely confronting the big manager.

Pinckney hesitated. His inclination was to throw Marsh out, but an idea, born of a girl's taunting, was in his mind, and he felt he must temporize. It was bitter to surrender to an employee, but Pinckney was a man who would submit to any number of minor defeats for a big end.

So he forced the best smile he could and held out his hand.

"Forgive me, Marsh," he said. "I am hot tempered, you know, and I have had a great deal to worry me. You have always had a wrong idea of me ever since that unfortunate accident in the chemical room. But every one makes mistakes, Marsh. You know that."

SUSPECTS ARRESTED

Further Action Taken in Case of Virginia Sextuple Murder Case.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 3.—According to a report received here from the Kentucky-Virginia state lines, A. Hurley and Howard Little, who are believed to know something of the sextuple murder in which George Meadows, his wife, three children and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Justice, lost their lives and were partially cremated in their burning home at Hurley, Va., have been arrested and that another arrest is expected at once.

At least three men are believed to be implicated in the murder, as the tracks of three men were found in the field near the scene of the crime. These were followed by bloodhounds until the trail was lost in the confusion of other scents.

Two men named Blankenship who were arrested recently have been released. The country around Hurley is greatly excited and all precautions will be taken to prevent mob violence.

Bullets Taken as Evidence.

Bluefield, W. Va., Oct. 3.—The body of George Meadows, who with his wife, mother-in-law and three children was murdered at Hurley, Va., recently, has been exhumed. Two bullets were removed from the body and it is said that they fitted a revolver which Howard Little, who has been arrested on suspicion, had borrowed from a neighbor. Little is being held at Welch and will be taken to Grundy, Va.

New Rule a Money Getter.

New York, Oct. 3.—Duties paid by trans-Atlantic travelers at the port of New York reached a new high-water mark during the month of September, according to a statement issued by Collector Loeb. The total for the month is almost double the monthly average, and is $100,000 greater than ever before collected in a single month.

Court Fines the Southern Pacific.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 3.—The Southern Pacific railroad pleaded guilty in the United States district court to rebating, and was fined $1,000 by Judge Wellborn. The company entered a plea of technical and unintentional guilt. The maximum penalty would have been $20,000.

SPITTING NUISANCE

Hawking and Spitting is Caused by Catarrh Germs.

If the local authorities want to stop the disgusting habit of spitting mucous on the sidewalk, they had better instruct the people as to the best method of killing the catarrh germs and curing catarrh.

You can easily tell by reading the symptoms below whether you have catarrh or not:

Offensive breath, frequent sneezing, discharge from nose, stoppage of the nose, huskiness of the voice, tickling in the throat, droppings in the throat, a cough, a pain in chest, loss of strength, variable appetite, spasms of coughing, low spirited at times, raising of mucous, difficulty in breathing, loss of vital force.

Johnson's drug store has a sensible remedy (money back if it fails) for catarrh, called Hyomei, which is a vaporized air so antiseptic that when it is breathed over the inflamed and germ-infested membrane, it kills all germ life and cures catarrh.

The price, including hard rubber inhaler, is only $1.00, and money back if it doesn't cure. Extra bottles 50 cents.

"I have tried almost every catarrh cure on the market without benefit. Have been using Hyomei for one week and feel like a new man already."—Wm. V. Goode, Newark, Ohio, June 21, 1909.

THE PRESIDENT'S SUNDAY SERMON

Mr. Taft Refers To His Religious Experiences.

THE DUTY OF THE PRESIDENT

Mr. Taft Says Is to Welcome and to Suggest Every Instrument by Which the Morals and Religion of the Community May Be Elevated—The President Officiates at the Laying of the Cornerstone of a Universalist Church at Portland—He Is Being Entertained Today at California's Capital.

Sacramento, Cal., Oct. 4.—President Taft's party reached here this morning and the president was given a warm reception at California's capital. His address here was well received. The party continued on south from here and will reach Davis this evening. The latter half of the week will be given over to a visit to the Yosemite valley. San Francisco, Oakland and other points will be visited.

At Portland Sunday President Taft preached another sermon. The scene had changed from the Mormon tabernacle at Salt Lake on Sunday a week ago to the cornerstone laying of the First Universalist church in East Portland.

The president handled the silver trowel and worked hard to see that the stone was properly adjusted. His apparent earnestness in setting the stone called out great applause from the open-air audience.

The president referred to his various church experiences and in concluding said: "No church in this country, however, humble it may be, that preaches the doctrine of true religion and true morality, will lack my earnest support to make it more influential whenever opportunity offers."

Mr. Taft had a truly religious day, which began when he attended the morning services at the First Unitarian church in Portland. Following this service the president was the guest of honor at a luncheon tendered by Senator Bourne, and which included the various state and city officials.

In the early afternoon the president visited St. Mary's Roman Catholic school and made a five-minute address to the school children, in which he declared that loyalty to the church meant fidelity to country.

The line of march followed by the presidential party to East Portland was almost as crowded as were the streets on Saturday, and there was handclapping all along the way, with some cheering by the more enthusiastic in the Sunday throng.

After the president had been introduced at the cornerstone laying by Rev. James Corby, pastor of the church, he said:

"I don't know that anyone questions the propriety of my being here and officiating on such an occasion as this, or that an explanation of any sort is called for. But I want to say that I believe it to be the duty of the president of these United States to welcome and to suggest every instrument by which the morals and religion of the community may be elevated and maintained. Not long ago I officiated at the cornerstone laying of an orthodox Congregational church in Washington. Then I appeared in the pulpit of a Jewish tabernacle at Pittsburg. But a few days ago I helped to lay the cornerstone of a Catholic institution at Helena, Mont. And now it is my great pleasure to assist here today in laying the cornerstone of this Universalist church, which, like my own church, the Unitarian, is known as a liberal church.

"I am glad always to be present at such occasions as these, for I believe the cornerstone of modern civilization must continue to be religion and morality."

Jeffersonville, Ind., Oct. 4.—David Coaley, Cecil Mull and Robert Ritter, who live near Borden, were arraigned in the circuit court on the charge of whitecapping Lafayette Floyd, a farmer of Wood township, last July. It is alleged that they took him out at night, tied him to a tree and whipped him. They were held in bonds of $500 each.

MUCH INTEREST IN ROAD LAW DECISION

Restraining Order Dissolved and the Contract For Improving Danville Streets to be Let.

FINDINGS AGAINST FARMERS

A case of considerable interest to Rushville people was decided in the Hendricks county circuit court Saturday. Special Judge E. Webb Felt of Greenfield who heard the evidence in the case of three farmers against the county commissioners decided that the farmers were not entitled to an injunction to prevent the improvement of Danville streets under the three mile road law. He dissolved the temporary restraining order. He decided against the farmers on every proposition, saying that the plaintiffs had no case in court and that their remedy in the first place would have been by appeal from the action of the commissioners in granting the petitions for the improvements. He held an appeal to the higher court was impossible by law. Contracts will now be let for the improvement of six miles of streets.

AMUSEMENTS

The management of the Vaudet has an excellent program tonight in the film, "A Trip to Jupiter." The picture is of an educational nature, but is very entertaining with an interesting plot. Mrs. Blanche Wolverton will sing a new illustrated song.

The Palace has an unusually good program tonight in the two pictures, "Bewitched by a Statue," and "Just Drop a Line to Mother." They are both said to be highly entertaining and are guaranteed to please an audience. Miss Iva Brown will sing a new song.

The Star-Grand offers tonight two Biograph subjects. The first is a drama entitled "The Sealed Room." There is scarcely a palace, castle or chateau in all Europe over whose crumbling ruins there does not hang the spectre of some legend or mystery, but none are as intensely thrilling as the inspiration of this Biograph subject and in this production the Biograph has attained the very acme of motion picture art—most beautifully staged and costumed and acted in a manner infinitely more convincing than anything ever before attempted. The second subject "The Little Darling." This picture might be termed a comedy of errors, and is sure to cause a laugh. Mr. Robertson will sing the illustrated song.

Why We Advocate Fall Painting

Because in the fall the weather is more uniformly warm and sunny and more settled.
Because in the fall paint can be more successfully applied than in damp, cloudy or unsettled weather.
Because in the fall there are usually no dust-laden, insect carrying winds.
Because in the fall the wood is dry and the paint penetrates deeper, securing a firmer hold on it.
Because in the fall a paint application dries harder, more naturally and consequently will wear longer.
